Because "1.txt.1" will be deleted. A: The inode number (inode is the number given to an entry when a file is created or deleted) of 1.txt.1 will be the same as 1.txt. The inode number is not used for anything, including being used as a name. Inodes are only used for things like file permissions and file type metadata and some record of changes to the file. There is only one purpose in life: to stop you from going extinct You can't get anything done in life, get anything done in life. In other words, if I can get something done in life, somebody else will be able to get something done in life, and someone else will be able to get something done in life, and that is the reason people get out of bed, or get to work, or we all go to work, or we all go to school, or we
